The DSP evaluation engine examines trade characteristics each day in succession from the earliest data points, learning along the way. Continued performance is likely to improve because each successive year has more "learning" behind it. Also, some general technical rules are applied. Performance peaked in 2008, and began to decline through 2009 and into first quarter 2010. In March 2010 we performed our first "walk forward" reoptimization of the technical rules, which improved performance compared to the base model. In 2011 we will perform quarterly walk forward reoptimizations based on shorter time frames to improve performance and as a statistical tool to assist in comparing real performance to theoretically expected numbers.

Total # of months modeled since January 2003 =	107 mo's	Winning Months	74	Losing Months	32	Flat Months	1
Worst Single-Month Loss after Year 1 =	-934 pts	Average Monthly Win	479	Average Monthly Loss	-252	Winning Month %	69.8%
Maximum Consecutive Point Loss From January 2003 to Present =	-1125 pts.	(Different from draw-down, this is the worst consecutive daily loss after daily loss for any period since January 2003)

Absolute Maximum Daily Risk, Allowable Under Any Circumstances (Max Stop Loss Target) = 350 Points, or 30% of Account Equity

This level of risk may be present in the beginning stages of trading, when account equity has not built to a sufficient level to reduce risk further. Typically, as wins occur, account equity grows and profits are re-invested in order to trade more contracts with better insulation from risk.

Posting as required by CFTC - CFTC Rule 4.41: Hypothetical or simulated performance results have certain inherent limitations. Unlike an actual performance record, simulated results do not represent actual trading. Also, since the trades have not actually been executed, the results may have under- or over-compensated for the impact, if any, of certain market factors, such as lack of liquidity. Simulated trading programs in general are also subject to the fact that they are designed with the benefit of hindsight. No representation is being made that any account will or is likely to achieve profits or losses similar to those shown. Read the full MDF Trader Terms and Conditions here.
