The DSP evaluation engine simulates trading each day in succession from the earliest data points, learning along the way. So for the 6 years of back tested data, each year tested increases in performance because each successive year has more "learning" behind it. There are also some rules that do not depend on past performance, but work independently to supplement the "learning" evaluation engine.

Total # of months modeled since January 2003 =	91 mo's	Winning Months	57	Losing Months	29	Flat Months	5
Worst Single-Month Loss after Year 1 =	-934 pts	Average Monthly Win	507	Average Monthly Loss	-231	Winning Month %	66.3%
Maximum Consecutive Point Loss From January 2003 to Present =	-812 pts.	(Different from draw-down, this is the worst consecutive daily loss after daily loss for any period since January 2003)

Absolute Maximum Daily Risk, Allowable Under Any Circumstances (Max Stop Loss Target) = 350 Points, or 30% of Account Equity

This level of risk may be present in the beginning stages of trading, when account equity has not built to a sufficient level to reduce risk further. Typically, as wins occur, account equity grows and profits are re-invested in order to trade more contracts with better insulation from risk.

Posting as required by CFTC - CFTC Rule 4.41

Hypothetical or simulated performance results have certain inherent limitations. Unlike an actual performance record, simulated results do not represent actual trading. Also, since the trades have not actually been executed, the results may have under- or over-compensated for the impact, if any, of certain market factors, such as lack of liquidity. Simulated trading programs in general are also subject to the fact that they are designed with the benefit of hindsight. No representation is being made that any account will or is likely to achieve profits or losses similar to those shown. Read the full MDF Trader Terms and Conditions here.
